Homeland Security, HUD Offer Housing Payments to Evacuees

The Homeland Security and Housing and Urban Development departments announced Friday that citizens displaced by Hurricane Katrina can receive about $785 a month for three months to pay for transitional housing.

The aid is available to citizens who were evacuated from the Gulf Coast and have decided not to live in mobile trailers provided by the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Citizens must register with FEMA in order to receive the payments. The aid will be given to homeowners, renters, people who lived in public housing and those who were homeless prior to the hurricane.
